Drugs of plant origin are widely being used all over the world these days and have been recognized by researchers for their better therapeutic value as they are having very low adverse effects as compared with allopathic medicines. These natural drugs of plant origin may be better utilized by delivering it by a suitable delivery system. Novel drug delivery systems are now a days getting huge popularity. Present study is focused on various Novel drug delivery systems for the delivery of various herbal medicines.