A Prospective study on Impact of Gestational Diabetes Mellitus (GDM) Management on Burden of Diabetes mellitus (DM) in Uttar Pradesh India

Gestational diabetes mellitus (GDM) is a type of glucose intolerance which is often identified first time in pregnancy. It is important to assess whether in Uttar Pradesh (a largest state of India with one of the highest rate of the infant mortality rate) has also higher Chances of Infants Diabetes Mellitus(IDM) which may attribute it to GDM is an unanswered issue.

The factors contributing to low schools enrollment of females in South Sudan

This aimed to describe the factors contributed to low enrollments of female in school in South Sudan; these factors are either political reason, cultural reasons. The literature reviewed were from the related information from the prior researchers, their findings has significant to the females’ enrollments, but the failure of their researches was that, they recommend ...

Prevalence of antimicrobial self-medication among patients attending two hospitals in the Buea Health District, Cameroon
Background: Self-medication is an important public health problem in developed and developing countries, with antimicrobial resistance increasing over time as a result of antimicrobial abuse. The aim of this study was to determine the prevalence of antimicrobial self-medication as well as associated factors among outpatient consultations of two hospitals within the Bu ...
The role of general practitioner in the study of adverse drug reactions epidemiology in ambulatory care setting

Published On: February 02, 2019 | Pages: 003 - 007

Author(s): Jose Luis Turabian*

Adverse drug reactions (ADRs) cause considerable mortality and morbidity. Its importance becomes greater in relation to the current increase in the use of drugs and multimorbidity. Premarketing studies do not allow a complete knowledge of the safety of a medicine. Many ADRs occurring in the outpatient setting, but there is a significant lack of information regarding t ...