Usefulness of Intravitreal Dexamethasone Implant in Treatment of Persistent Cystoid Macular Edema Due to Irvine–Gass Syndrome

Published On: January 17, 2019 | Pages: 001 - 006

Author(s): Mya Thida Ohn*, Thompson E, Waghmare A, Chandra A and Karia N

Introduction: Pseudophakic cystoid macular edema (CME) is one of the commonest causes of visual impairment after uneventful cataract surgery. There is no standardized protocol for pseudophakic CME and cases with refractory or persistent CME remained therapeutic challenge. ...