Alcohol use, antiretroviral medication adherence and Sexual behaviors among young HIV-Infected Women engaged in HIV Medical Care in St. Petersburg, Russia

Published On: November 20, 2017 | Pages: 032 - 040

Author(s): Olga S Levina*, Jennifer L Brown, Jessica M Sales, Eve S Rose, Polina Safonova, Nickolay A Belyakov, Vadim V Rassokhin and Ralph J DiClemente

With over a million people diagnosed with HIV by the beginning of 2016, Russia has one of the world’s most rapidly developing HIV epidemics. Evidence suggests young women in Russia are at high risk for HIV and comprise a substantial portion of newly infected people. ...

HIV/AIDS Risk for Young Female Petty Traders at Car Parks

Published On: September 29, 2017 | Pages: 018 - 031

Author(s): Yahya Muhammed Bah

Though the HIV/AIDS prevalence rate in The Gambia is one of the lowest in the sub-region, the disease and its associated effects has always been a concern both to the government, non-governmental organizations, professionals, families, communities, development partners, etc. Over the decade a number of studies have been conducted in the areas of its mode of transmi ...
Opportunistic and other intestinal parasites infections among HIV positive patients in the era of combination antiretroviral therapy and preventive treatment in Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso

Published On: August 29, 2017 | Pages: 008 - 014

Author(s): Adama Zida, Abdourahamane Yaouba*, Marcel P Sawadogo, Ismael Diallo, Ibrahima Sangare, Sanata Bamba, Bassory Ouattara and Tinga R Guiguemde

Background: One of the particularities of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) infection in the tropics is its frequent association with parasitic diseases so frequent in this area. Aim: The aim of this study was to update the epidemiological and clinical profile of intestinal parasites among HIV-positive patients in the era of combination antiretroviral therapy (AR...
Author(s): Charles John Palenik*

Healthcare is the fastest growing sector (5.6% increase in 2016) of the United States economy, comprising 17.8% ($3.2 trillion) of the gross domestic product. There are more than 18,000,000 American healthcare professionals (HCP) [1,2]. ...